In a perfect world . . .

What do we see for Chinatown? How creative can we get in figuring out how to get there?
That's what it's about - solutions.

Is Urban Equilibrium the goal? Urban Equilibrium is an ideal status that many cities pursue but rarely achieve.

Picture a city where the number of residents and businesses are equally balanced. Imagine a housing stock where the type and price range of houses accommodates all segments of the community. Reaching Urban Equilibrium means all existing residential, commercial, and industrial development are utilized without pockets of vacancy or blight.

Join us to get creative with Chinatown solutions.
